

Series A funding raised by health-tech startup Good Methods

08 May 2017 | News

Good Methods has engineered a cloud-based practice management platform for the health and wellness industry in the US.

Kerala- and US-based health-tech startup Good Methods Global Inc has raised Series A funding led by venture capital firm Accel Partners.

The startup will use the capital to step up its sales efforts and product adoption, and to ramp up product engineering and talent acquisition. As part of the transaction, Shekhar Kirani, partner at Accel India, will join the Good Methods board.

Good Methods has engineered a cloud-based practice management platform for the health and wellness industry in the US. The first area of focus is dentistry, where its clientele includes large dental groups and multi-location practice chains.

Including this round, Good Methods has raised over $9 million so far. The Good Methods team is spread across Thiruvananthapuram in Kerala, and Florida and Texas in the US.