

health of children in tribal areas:

- Assessing health needs of children in tribal areas
- Improving delivery of evidence based interventions for maternal, newborn and child health through continuum of care approach
- Developing linkages for referral care for newborns and under five children within existing health care system
- Strategy to improve coverage of evidence based child survival interventions within the existing health care system
- Situation analysis of health work force in primary and referral health care setting, creating enabling environment for health care providers (pre service training, skill building and sustaining skills, supportive supervision)
- Developing tools / inbuilt system for monitoring and evaluation of various health care programs
- Use of modern technology for improving quality of care, vital registration, communication among health care service providers
- Strategies for empowering communities / tribal women for improving health care seeking behavior for sick children
- Creating awareness about common preventable disorders and maintaining registers for such diseases for future course of action