Paras Healthcare to establish presence in Jharkhand

19 December 2019 | News

New entity to be called Paras HEC Hospital, Ranchi is Paras Healthcareâ??s 8th hospital

As part of efforts to expand presence in Tier II and Tier III cities of northern India, Paras Healthcare has tied up with PSU Heavy Engineering Corporation (HEC) to establish and operate a 300 bed multi-specialty hospital in Ranchi.

The new facility will upgrade the existing HEC Hospital in Ranchi by adding secondary and tertiary care facilities such as MRI, CT and Cath lab services. The new facility is to be called Paras HEC Hospital. The opening of Ranchi hospital marks the entry of the Paras group in Jharkhand and with this hospital; Paras group has added one more feather to its cap in North India.

Dr Dharminder Nagar, MD, Paras Healthcare said, “We are happy to announce that we are collaborating with the prestigious PSU HEC to upgrade the existing HEC Hospital in Ranchi to a multi-specialty hospital with advanced diagnostic and treatment facilities. Paras HEC Hospital, Ranchi is being set up under Design – Build – Finance- Operate & Transfer (DBFOT) basis on public-private partnership by Paras and HEC. HEC shall handover the hospital to Paras in existing condition with a long term lease agreement. Paras shall renovate the existing structure, built additional area equipped with all modern technologies, arrange for all project and operational expense and manage it for the entire lease term. This move will help us improve the availability of secondary and tertiary care to the large population in Ranchi and adjoining areas.”

Paras HEC Hospital has already started operations of general specialties through a 50 bed set up and has a plan to invest further to build 250 beds facility over the next 2 years & meet the medical needs of underserved population of Ranchi.

In first phase Paras would be starting key clinical programs which includes General Surgery, Orthopedics, pediatrics, Gynecology & Obstetrics, Internal Medicine, ENT to name a few. In the second phase, we would be coming up with Tertiary care services which include Neurosurgery, Cardiac Surgery, Neurology, Gastroenterology, Urology etc. The hospital will provide a 24*7 Emergency and Trauma Centre, ICU and NICU facilities as well as advanced Radiology and Pathology services.

“As a healthcare provider, we have a reputation of providing highly affordable care without compromising on quality. Over the past decade, our focus has been on expanding our presence in smaller towns and cities among the under-served populations of the country. Our hospitals in Patna, Darbhanga and Panchkula have been instrumental in filling a major void of tertiary care in these areas. With its strategic location and good connectivity by rail and road, Ranchi has the potential to serve as a healthcare centre for not just the adjoining towns and districts of Jharkhand but also to the border towns of Bihar, Chhattisgarh and West Bengal,” added Dr Nagar.

Paras Group currently operates 8 hospitals across India.
