DCDC Nephrine Renal Care in New Delhi has received the NABH (National Accreditation Board for Hospitals & Healthcare Providers) Accreditation. The centre has become the first and only standalone centre in India to receive NABH accreditation in the kidney dialysis network.

The accreditation has been awarded based on an evaluation of the DCDC centre against numerous standards and objective elements. NABH is an institutional member of the International Society for Quality in Health Care (ISQua) as well as a member of the ISQua Accreditation Council.

The dialysis centre in Hauz Khas has implemented quality standards set up by the NABH (National Accreditation Board for Hospitals and Healthcare Providers). Over the last many years DCDC has earned the reputation of being the most trusted in running kidney dialysis network across India.

Speaking during the occasion, Aseem Garg, CEO, DCDC Kidney Care said, “NABH accreditation is a major milestone for any healthcare provider as it recognises the fact that our facilities and norms meet established quality and safety standards. This also reinforces our commitment to making quality healthcare accessible, affordable and accountable to communities who need it the most.”

DCDC operates a network of dialysis and kidney care centres that provide care for acute and end-stage renal disease patients in India. The company offers dialysis services, including in-centre and home hemodialysis, peritoneal dialysis, and AV fistula and AV graft procedures and allied services that include counselling and diet and nutrition advice.
