Cloudphysician raises $4 M in Pre Series A Funding from Elevar Equity

28 October 2021 | News

Cloudphysician looks to expand its critical care footprint globally, develop adjacent solutions and grow its commercial, medical, technology and data science talent

Cloudphysician, a healthcare and technology solutions provider focussed on affordable and quality critical care, has raised $4 million Pre Series A funding from Elevar Equity. Founded by Dr Dhruv Joshi (Pulmonary and Critical Care Specialist; American Board of Internal Medicine) and Dr Dileep Raman (Pulmonary, Critical Care Medicine and Sleep Medicine Specialist; American Board of Internal Medicine), Cloudphysician is on a mission to tackle the problem of unavailability of skilled critical care specialists in remote locations in India and emerging markets. With this round of funding, Cloudphysician will expand its global footprint and invest in commercial, medical, technology and data science talent.

Collaborating with Cloudphysician gives hospitals access to their robust team of highly experienced intensive care experts and their proprietary ICU management cloud platform, RADARTM to manage critically ill patients remotely and in real-time. This exponentially improves the level of care and quality that hospitals can provide for patients.
