Fonder Speaks-

"Diagnostics is no longer just about the detection of diseases. As a whole, the healthcare industry has realised that this vertical has moved beyond the four walls of a hospital and has become more agile. Furthermore, it is the patients that stand to benefit the most from at-home diagnostics and healthcare services as the proliferation of healthcare at home has created a complete ecosystem by itself that can help people complete the entire health management sequence from the comfort of the home - from blood tests to teleconsultation with doctors and finally, medicine delivery. In addition, the treatment of chronic conditions through home health checkups is gradually becoming a habit, as people realise the value and convenience they offer. Diagnostics market would be $30 billion alone in the next 5 years and a significant part of it would also be digital and home healthcare."
