

Cardiff University Alumni announce UK-India strategic partnership for immunity testing

02 March 2023 | News

To tackle global problems in healthcare

ImmunoServ from Cardiff, Wales, UK has signed a strategic partnership with ImmunitasBio of Bengaluru, to formalise its support for each other in their shared purpose in providing expert immunology products and services across the world.

The two companies have worked on tackling the COVID-19 pandemic supporting vaccine research and providing immunity testing in their respective countries. Beyond COVID-19, ImmunoServ and ImmunitasBio are collaborating to develop and commercialise immunity tests for other infectious diseases such as influenza, as well as cancer and autoimmunity.

The leaders of these two companies have a long and enduring history together. Dr James Hindley, CEO of ImmunoServ and Dr Sivasankar Baalashubramanian, CEO and Founder of ImmunitasBio met whilst studying together at Cardiff University's School of Medicine in 2006. Following this they remained good friends and started an entrepreneurial journey together in 2014 when they founded InBio India, a sister company of UK based Indoor Biotechnologies (now InBio UK). After exiting this allergy focused business in 2020, the two immunologist entrepreneurs are now working together to bring immunity testing to the world.

Dr Sivasankar Baalashubramanian, said, "The healthcare market already has liver function tests, kidney function tests, but what we are developing is immune function tests. These predictive health tests can provide actionable insights into many diseases."