This partnership marks a significant step towards accessible and affordable healthcare in rural regions

Dvara Health Finance (DHF), an early innovator in healthcare financing, has announced a strategic partnership with Zeno Health, aiming to transform the landscape of rural healthcare in India. This collaboration focuses on bringing high-quality, cost-effective generic medication for chronic conditions like diabetes and hypertension directly to rural households.

DHF, with its NEEM Account that integrates savings, insurance, and outpatient care, is at the forefront of reducing healthcare costs for individuals. The partnership with Zeno Health, a major supplier of high-quality generic medicines, strengthens this effort, ensuring that essential medications are not only affordable but also easily accessible.

Bindu Ananth, Founder & CEO of Dvara Health Finance, stated, "Our partnership with Zeno Health is a crucial step in our mission to make healthcare affordable and accessible in rural India. Together, we aim to alleviate the financial strain of healthcare on rural families and improve health outcomes."

Zeno Health's role in supplying affordable, high-quality generic medicines is central to this partnership. By offering up to 80% savings on medications, this initiative is set to make a significant difference in the lives of those in rural communities. The convenience of doorstep delivery and monthly refills further enhances the value of this collaboration.

Siddharth Gadia, Co-Founder of Zeno Health commented, "Joining hands with Dvara Health Finance allows us to extend our mission of accessible healthcare to rural India."
