Addressing the critical shortage of radiologists worldwide

Apollo Radiology International (ARI), a unit of Apollo Hospitals Group and a premier global teleradiology provider, has announce acquisition of the radiology reporting wing of InHealth Group, the UK's largest specialist provider of diagnostic and healthcare solutions.

This acquisition solidifies ARI's commitment to addressing the critical shortage of radiologists worldwide, enhancing access to quality diagnostic services across the UK and globally. ARI is projected report over two million scans annually, covering 24 countries and continuing to serve 200+ healthcare organizations.

This collaboration marks a seamless fusion of InHealth's expertise in providing radiology reporting to the UK's NHS and ARI's global reach, technical excellence, and AI-powered solutions. Together, ARI and InHealth aim to extend reporting services across a wider network of NHS-partners in the UK, addressing critical gaps in radiology staffing and providing patients with accurate, timely diagnoses.

This acquisition also extends ARI's current commitment to the UK health sector. As a global exam delivery partner of The Royal College of Radiologists and a recruitment partner of NHS England, ARI has been supporting the NHS through academic and training initiatives and radiologist recruitment programs for over eight years. Through this partnership with InHealth, ARI reinforces its dedication to training, accrediting, and providing essential diagnostic support to the NHS and beyond.
