Encouraging new ideas and upholding the highest ethical standards in medical research

Artemis Hospitals and Government Institute of Medical Sciences (GIMS), has announced a significant partnership aimed at accelerating medical research and enhancing patient care. This agreement will see the two institutions collaborate closely on a range of clinical trials and research initiatives.

"This Master Service Agreement (MSA) marks a significant step forward in our dedication to enhancing patient care and advancing medical knowledge," stated Dr. (Brig.) Anil Khetarpal, Spokesperson for Artemis Hospitals. "By collaborating with GIMS, we aim to accelerate the development of innovative treatments and make a tangible difference in the lives of our patients", he said.

The key objectives will focus on encouraging new ideas and upholding the highest ethical standards in medical research, ensuring the safety and rights of all clinical trial participants; Creating and implementing the latest medical treatments and technologies through carefully designed clinical trials that prioritize patient safety, minimise risks, and maximize potential benefits; and Focusing on enhancing the care and results for patients by using the most current medical evidence.

Artemis Hospitals and GIMS aims to become leaders in finding new medical solutions and taking great care of patients. By working together, the organisations hope to discover new things that will make medicine better.
