Seasoned commercial leader to scale early diagnosis, frontline care and Qure.ai's clinical co-pilot Aira

Mumbai-based Qure.ai, an AI technology company focused on healthcare, has announced the appointment of Mihir Bhanushali as Executive Vice President, Global Health, as the company deepens its investment in AI-powered healthcare across low- and middle-income countries (LMICs).

Bhanushali joins Qure.ai from Freshworks, where he was Senior Director, Global Sales. A seasoned commercial leader, he has built and scaled high-growth businesses across global markets, with earlier leadership roles at Rippling and Whatfix spanning sales, go-to-market strategy and commercial transformation.

At Qure.ai, Bhanushali will lead the next phase of the company's growth across LMICs, with a focus on Africa, Southeast Asia, South Asia and Latin America. His mandate spans the company's solutions for infectious diseases, including tuberculosis and HIV, and care delivery across frontline health systems.

Qure.ai is expanding beyond screening and early diagnosis into broader care delivery. At the centre of this expansion is Aira, Qure.ai's AI doctor and clinical co-pilot for frontline healthcare, which brings clinical intelligence, digital workflows and care coordination closer to the point of care, with applications across primary care, telemedicine, HIV, infectious diseases and pandemic preparedness.
