

Sartorius Stedim Biotech acquires Cellca

08 July 2015 | News | By BioSpectrum Bureau

Sartorius Stedim Biotech acquires Cellca

Sartorius Stedim Biotech (SSB) has acquired Germany-based Cellca, a cell line and process development company.

Through this acquisition, SSB is further expanding its service offering for process development. The company has already strengthened this segment by its two recent acquisitions of BioOutsource and TAP Biosystems.

Mr Reinhard Vogt, member of the SSB executive committee for marketing and sales, said, "Together with our single-use products, media and testing services, we are creating an attractive package, above all for young biopharmaceutical companies that need robust processes for the manufacture of their biologics."

"Due to its global presence and high reputation, SSB is an ideal partner for Cellca. We now have a strong base to further expand and develop our business internationally," said Mr Hugo de Wit, managing director, Cellca.